DETAILED ACTION

Priority

1. Receipt is acknowledged of papers submitted under 35 U.S.C. 119(a)-(d), which papers have been placed of record in the file.

Drawings

2. The drawings are objected to because cut-away views of insulative portions, such as housing modules 2 and 3, should be cross-hatched as such. A proposed drawing correction or corrected drawings are required in reply to the Office action to avoid abandonment of the application. The objection to the drawings will not be held in abeyance.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 8 and 10-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over EPO 0560696 in view of Castonguay et al. [US 6,037,555].

EPO 0560696. disclose a circuit breaker [figure 1] comprising:

- an interrupter chamber housing [10] having an outside wall of a plastic material;

Art Unit: 2832

- an interrupter including a pair of u-shaped stationary contacts [24, 25] embedded within the interrupter chamber;

- a rotary pivotal movable contact member [44'] movably connected with at least one of the stationary contacts;

- a magnetic member [33] connected in the leg connection portion of the stationary contacts;
and

- first and second contact pads [figure 2] connected with the stationary terminals.

EPO 0560696 discloses the instant claimed invention except for: the bus bar being force fit within the outside wall and the use of a bus bar with both of the stationary contacts.

Castonguay et al. discloses a bus bar [figure 25] force fit with a housing shell portion.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use force fit the bus bar of EPO 0560696 into the outside wall, as suggested by EPO 0560696, for the purpose of facilitating assembly and/or replacement.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use an additional bus bar for the stationary contacts of EPO 0560696, for the purpose of enabling mounting within a bus type box.

Claims 9 and 16-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over EPO 0560696 in view of Castonguay et al. as applied to claim 8 above, and further in view of Tanimizu et al. [US 5,719,365].

Art Unit: 2832

EPO 0560696, as modified, disclose the instant claimed invention except for: the stationary contact assembly being injection molded within the outside wall.

Tanimizu et al. discloses a contact support member [41a] being molded within a casing of a circuit interrupter.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use an injection molding process for the contact assembly of EPO 0560696, as modified, for the purpose rigidly supporting the contact within the housing and simplifying construction.

The claimed method steps would have been inherent in the product structure.
